WE WILL BRING

ASYMMETRICAL TIRES

FRONT AND REAR

The Ricardo Tormo circuit in Valencia is atypical, since it is taken in an anti-clockwise direction. It is one of the three circuits that run in this direction, along with the Sachsenring, in Germany, and Philip Island, in Australia. As in Qatar, here we will discover a track that has been completely resurfaced in recent weeks, but we will not need to test more specifications than usual because the expected low track temperatures already directs us towards relatively soft compounds. Our MICHELIN Power Slicks will therefore be available in three compounds (Soft, Medium and Hard) for the front, and two (Soft and Medium) for the rear. Taking into account the characteristics of the track and the number of turns, we will bring asymmetrical tires front and rear, although it is more usual that the front remains symmetrical. The left side of the tires will be reinforced in order to handle the demands of the circuit.
